

Homeowner's Guide: Sending Flooring Samples

itel's scientific, objective analysis helps the homeowner and adjusters arrive at a fair settlement price. The process uses precise physical specifications and currently available flooring styles to identify comparable flooring. Using itel is easy and fast, with results returned in as little as one business day.

Step 1: Collect the Flooring Sample

Read all directions before removing flooring. Keep safety in mind when collecting samples. Be cautious around sharp tools and edges; always wear safety gloves and eye protection. If you have safety concerns, consider asking a contractor to collect a sample for you.

itel determines 'Like Kind and Quality' flooring styles based on specifications from the original product. For the most accurate results, collect the cleanest, least damaged, and least worn sample. Corners of rooms and closets are ideal places to collect flooring samples, as they tend to experience less traffic and wear.

Guidelines for Collecting Floor Samples

- Carpet: Cut a 10" x 10" or larger sample of the carpet. A sample of the pad can also be collected when cutting the carpet sample.
- Vinyl: Cut a 2" x 2" or larger piece of flooring. If the sample is a vinyl tile, a complete tile can be sent. Place the vinyl sample in a small plastic bag.
- Laminate and Wood: A full-width and thickness of the plank (including the tongue and groove) and 10" of length is requested for wood and laminate flooring. An uninstalled piece from the original installation can be sent and is the easiest to collect. For glueless, snap-together flooring, you may be able to lift an entire piece from the floor by removing the baseboard at the intersection of two walls.
 - If the wood flooring is glued or nailed down, follow the glueless procedures. The first board pulled up may break apart, but additional boards will be easier to remove.
